STAY WARM THIS SEASON WITH A POWERFUL DUO

The combination of using Waste Oil Heaters with MacroAir Fans is a tailor-made solution that is perfect for businesses looking to cut down on heating costs while improving their operations.

An innovative and cost-effective way to keep your business warm, waste oil heaters operate by burning used motor oils, hydraulic fluids, or cooking oils.

They can deliver substantial cost savings, with waste oil often being a free or low-cost fuel source, reducing the dependence on traditional, more expensive fuel options.

With a fan technology that is as effective as it is efficient, MacroAir fans significantly reduce your energy costs compared to traditional forced-air systems. They bring a silent, soft breeze that ensures heat is not wasted by being trapped near the ceiling, as is often the case in large, open spaces.

DISCOVER THE SOLUTION TO CUTTING ENERGY COSTS: WASTE OIL HEATERS WITH MACROAIR FANS

As annual heating costs continue to rise, many businesses are looking for ways to improve their energy efficiency.

Waste oil heaters provide an already-excellent solution for businesses that generate large quantities of waste oil, such as auto repair shops, corporate farms, trucking companies, car dealerships, manufacturing facilities, and restaurants.

But waste oil heaters alone may not be enough to keep your business warm and comfortable. That's where MacroAir fans come in. Unlike traditional fans that move air in a circular pattern, MacroAir fans are designed to move large volumes of air throughout a space, creating a more even distribution of heat. By combining waste oil heaters with MacroAir fans, businesses can achieve a more efficient heating system, reducing energy costs even further. Learn how these systems work together and the many benefits of utilizing these two systems together during the colder months of the year.
